REPORT AND RECOMMENDATION TO DENY
PETITION FOR A WRIT OF HABEAS CORPUS

On May 22, 2013, petitioner filed with this Court a petition for a writ of habeas corpus challenging prison disciplinary proceeding 20130089772, which occurred December 6, 2012. The disciplinary proceeding took place at the Clements Unit in Potter County, Texas. As of the date the instant habeas petition was filed, petitioner remained incarcerated at the Clements Unit.

Prisoners “may not be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law.” Wolff v. McDonnell, 418 U.S. 539, 556, 94 S.Ct. 2963, 2974, 41 L.Ed.2d 935 (1974). If a prisoner contends his unit of incarceration has deprived him of his liberty without due process of law, he may seek relief in federal court via a habeas corpus petition. Wolff, 418 at 557, 94 S.Ct. at 2975.

When the State of Texas created a right to good-time credit and recognized that its revocation is an authorized sanction for misconduct, “a prisoner’s interest therein became embraced within the Fourteenth Amendment’s liberty concerns so as to entitle him to those minimum procedures appropriate under the circumstances and required by the due process clause to insure that this state-created right is not arbitrarily abrogated.” Malchi v. Thaler, 211 F.3d 953, 958 (5th Cir. 2000).

However, because federal habeas corpus is meant to redress the violation of a liberty interest, when it is brought in the context of a challenge to a prison disciplinary proceeding, the petitioner must, at a minimum, be eligible for mandatory supervised release and have received a punishment sanction which included a forfeiture of previously accrued good-time credits. See id. Otherwise, no liberty interests are implicated and any claims brought in habeas corpus are not cognizable.

In line sixteen of his habeas corpus petition, petitioner indicates his belief that he is eligible for release on mandatory supervision. However, as petitioner indicates in paragraph eighteen of his habeas corpus petition, petitioner did not lose any previously earned good-time credits as a result of the disciplinary proceeding. Petitioner states his punishment as a result of the proceeding was forty-five days' loss of recreation, commissary, and property privileges. The loss of recreation, commissary, and property privileges are not challengeable in federal habeas corpus because those punishments do not represent "the type of atypical, significant deprivation in which a State might conceivably create a liberty interest." Sandin v. Conner, 515 U.S. 474, 486, 115 S.Ct. 2293, 132 L.Ed.2d 418 (1995); Madison v. Parker, 104 F.3d 765, 765 (5th Cir. 1997). Stated differently, such restrictions do not implicate a constitutionally protected liberty interest. Petitioner additionally suffered the punishment of remaining classified at "Line 3," which impacts the rate at which petitioner can earn good-time credits. The Fifth Circuit has, however, specifically evaluated punishments dealing with line classification and held such punishments are not challengeable in federal habeas corpus. Luken v. Scott, 71 F.3d 192, 193 (5th Cir. 1995) (holding "[t]he loss of the opportunity to earn good-time credits, which might lead to earlier parole, is a collateral consequence of [petitioner's] custodial status. Yet, such speculative, collateral consequences of prison administrative decisions do not create constitutionally protected liberty interests."). Consequently, because petitioner did not suffer a loss that might be redressed in federal habeas corpus, i.e. did not lose any good-time credits as a result of the challenged disciplinary proceeding, the habeas corpus petition must be denied. See Malchi, 211 F.3d at 958.
